OF MURDER

Jury Says He Directed the Killing of Rosenthal

WILL FILE ANOTHER APPEAL

Dramatic Scene in Court Room When Verdict Was Announced by Jury Foreman

New York, May 23.-Twelve men time that Charles Becker was the arch conspirator responsible for the Rosenthal murder which nearly two years ago awoke New York to a real! zation of corruption in the police department and opened a new era of pelice reform. Becker, once a police lieutenant, was found guilty of mur- Two Step-"Too Much Mustard" der in the first degree. The jury yeaterday decided that the "gunmen" were Becker's agents.

One ballot decided Becker's fate. Pownal church promptly at nine thir- It was taken almose immediately after the jurors returned from lunche on at an uptown hotel, where they went as soon as Supreme Court Justice Samuel Seabury finished his charge. It was unanimous for conviction. Tears streamed down the foreman's face as he announced the decision and tears stood in the eyes of several other jurors; but sympathy did not warp their judgment.

Becker's counsel announced that he would appeal, and gained a week's stay for the preparation of his future The North Pownal church will well campaign. The defendant was granted a short meeting with his wife and brothers and then taken back to his honorary president, added much to cell in the Tombs.

Becker and his wife were talking The parlor in which the meeting just before 5 o'clock in a room adjoin was held was decorated with a large ing the sheriff's office when a court United States flag and a beautif attendant from the judge's chambers | Colonial flag, the latter kindly loanannounced that the jury had reached mitted to accompany her husband to the court-room. The 12 men filed silently in with Foreman F. Meriden Mrs. Henry S. Bingham of Benning Blagden at their head. All their faces were expressionless. Justice

Seabury mounted the bench. Becker in the room overhead was still talking to his wife when Justice Scabury took his seat. Clerk Penny called "Charles Becker to the bar, and a bailiff was sent for the defendant. Becker kissed his wife and left her. "It's all right," he told her, "Don't worry, They'll free me." Becker entered by the door through which the jury had passed only a minute before. He walked briskly to the rail facing Justice Sea bury and gripped it with both hands. His face was colorless. Clerk Penny asked the jury to rise. "Forman," he said, "have you reached a verdict?" Blagden, a youngish man, blond and slim, brush ed his eyes with a handkerchief al ready damp, "We have," he said softly, "We find the defendanthe hesitated a moment and continued in a whisper: "We find this defendant guilty as charged in the indict ment; guilty of murder in the first de gree." Big tears welled into the eyes of the litle foreman. He wiped them away with his hand and then the clerk began to ask the questions required by law. The roll was called and each individual juror was asked if "guilty" was his verdict, too.

Immediately upon this conclusion the clerk began to take Becker's nual meeting the society has receiv-"pedigree." To the first question: Becker answered in a steady voice that he was 43, was born in the United States and that his parents had both been born in Germany.

"Married?" queried the clerk. For a moment Becker did not answer. Then almost in a whisper he replied, "yes."

As to his occupation Becker said he was a "former police officer in the city of New York," a Roman Catholic and of temperate habits. Asked whether he had ever been convicted before Becker looked helplessly at was standing beside him. Manton mumbled something. The pair shook hands.

"What's the answer?" again asked the clerk.

ever, it has been done. I will im mediately set to work to prepare an appeal. We will fight and fight hard to have Becker cleared of this charge."

The verdict caught Becker unprepared, for when the jury first retired his lawyer told him he looked for an acquittal. The defendant at that time declared he did not believe it possible he could be convicted on the evidence presented at the second trial, Mrs. Becker was even more hopeful. "I cannot conceive," she said, "that any 12 sensible men can give credence to such cooked-up storles as those told by Rose, Webber, Vallon and Plitt. I don't expect a conviction. The worst that can happen is a disagreement. Charles is in nocent and he will be exonerated."

Negotiations

Niagars Falls, Ont., May 22 .-Such substantial progress did the A B. C. envoys make today in their efforts to bring about a solution of the Mexican problem that they are now endeavoring to select members of a commission to administer the affairs of the republic until a permanent Government can be established in the capital under constitutional forms. Tonight the South American diplomats are inclined to be elated over the prospects of a satisfactory conclusion of their mission. The Mexican delegates have pressed hearty agreement with the commission plan. The American delegates, while cautious in their attitude, have concurred in the general principle involved. Thus the envoys have good reason to think that indications point to the success of their plan of settlement so far as the concurrence of Huerta's delegates and the United States Government can make it successful. The Constitutionalists still have to be reckoned with. They have not vet notified the envoys of any purpose to take part formally in the negotiations here, but there are signs that they have abandoned their attitude of indifference toward the peace movement and are inclined to view it more favorably. The moral support, ing Mr. Morgan." which the plan to bring about peace is receiving throughout the United States and Latin America, is thought responsible for the kindlier disposition which the Constitutionalists are showing.

A "LIVE WIRE" OF DULUTH

William E. O'Donnell Has Made Good

In a Hustling City The Duluth (Minn.) Herald of Thursday evening, May 14 published a gallery of "The Live Wires of Duluth." In this special edition were published photographie likenesses of the men who are "doing things" in Duluth. They are the leaders in their respective profession. They are the men who are typical of the new "Booster" spirit that has sprung up in Duluth in the last few years. They do not hesitate to give time and money, thought or energy, to any enterprise that has for the object, the making of Duluth a bigger, or more prosperous city or a better place to live in.

They may not all be financieers or captains of industry, but each in his particular line has shown himself a wide-awake, energetic, hustling citizen with a broad enough vision to see beyond the horizon of his own business and get a mental picture of the Duluth that is to be.

Among these portraits is the picture of a Bennington boy, William E O'Donnell, who has been living in Du luth for some years and who visited his mother, Mrs. O'Donnell, last Christmas and called on old friends whom he had not seen for years. Mr O'Donnell expects to visit her home again during the coming summer, making the trip from Duluth by au-
